BizWorld.org Announces 5 Finalists for the BizWorld Girlpreneur Competition
Panel of judges including Mark Cuban, Tim Draper and Sue Siegel to decide this Saturday, October 15 at the Girls Festival in San Francisco

San Francisco, CA – October 11, 2016 -- BizWorld.org, a global non-profit providing hands-on and engaging entrepreneurship education programs for elementary and middle school children, announced the 5 finalists that will do live business “pitches” to a panel of judges in front of a packed auditorium at the Girls Festival this Saturday at Fort Mason. The Girlpreneur Competition is a contest designed to sprout the spirit of entrepreneurship among girls. Girlpreneur advances the mission of BizWorld to educate students on entrepreneurship, finances, and the life skills that come from actively participating in entrepreneurship programs. The first place winner of Saturday’s competition will win $2,500 to help finance her business and a business consultation from one of the judges of her choosing, Tim Draper, Mark Cuban or Sue Seigel, and the gift of the BizWorld program for a school and classroom of her choosing.

“We aim to de-mystify entrepreneurship and inspire all girls to act upon their ideas and dreams,” said Thais Rezende, CEO of BizWorld.org. “These finalists are evidence that girls can lead and succeed and that their ideas can be made real if they take action. They give all of us the confidence to dream big and we are very proud of them.”

The 5 finalists are:
Natasha Rao and Priya Vyas of Fremont for their company Coepic
Lucia Patterson of Oakland for her company Lucy’s Sushi
Ginger Bernstein of Mill Valley for her company Myself
Charlotte and Caitlin Kane of San Francisco for their company be-tween
And Cassandra Aguilar Olmos of Hawthorne, CA for her company Pawsitive

The 5 finalists and additional semifinalists were selected by a panel of Draper U and BizWorld judges. The business ideas were chosen based on creativity, viability and marketability. The winners will be chosen on Saturday at the Girls Festival after each contestant has had an opportunity to pitch her business and take questions from the judges. The winner will be announced at 12:00 noon.

Other contestants will also be showing their business ideas at BizWorld.org’s exhibitor booth on Saturday.
